Commander's Message
July 2005

Enjoy a beautiful day on Lake George! Spend the day aboard the 27' motor vessel "Final Approach" courtesy of Capt. Buck Bryan! Crew requirements: Willing to work for the glory and gratitude that come from participating in updating data for the new Lake George Power Squadron Chart. Buck drives the boat; you watch readings on the depth sounder and GPS, and mark the results on a worksheet. It's simple, it's fun and what could be better than spending a day on the most beautiful lake in New York, some say the country. And as bonus, you'll be doing something positive for the safety of the boating public by helping us publish the best, most accurate chart of the lake. There is no specific schedule. For those among us who have time during the week, it's even better as the lake is less crowded than on the weekend. If you want to volunteer, please contact Buck directly at 664-9815. He'll make sure that you get slotted in at an appropriate day and time.

Please help out. It's important. AND IT WILL BE FUN!

Earlier this month the LGPS sponsored a boat for the Canal Fest boat parade. Past Commander John Jermano's boat, the Pilgrim Tug "Caprice" received honorable mention. Canal Fest was a great time for those who came. Some members helped decorate the boat. Special kudos to Donna Canestraro and Sarah Jermano who came up with the decorating concept and decorations. We had our LGPS banner proudly displayed on the starboard side of "Caprice", and after we had passed the reviewing stand, some of the crew made sure that the banner was immediately moved to the port side so that the hundreds of people watching from the banks of the Mohawk near the reviewing stand could not miss that this was the LGPS boat. In fact host Jack Arnecke, I believe, made a comment about it as we passed by again. In keeping with our theme of boating safety, we also had a banner on each side advertising free vessel safety checks.

Max Gollmer and his entire family (I believe there were about 20 grandchildren on his boat - only a slight exaggeration) cheered us on as we went by.

At Canal Fest at the Schenectady Yacht Club, P/C Jermano conducted well-attended and fascinating tours of the works, the old canal store with plenty of enlarged old photographs depicting the history and development of the canal. In spite of the variable weather, everyone had a great time.

Please look at our schedule of exciting events and participate. ALSO, ONE MORE TIME – THE CHART COMMITTEE NEEDS YOUR HELP WITH THE DEPTH SOUNDING, DELTA IDENTIFICATION AND ACCURATE REGISTRATION OF THE AIDS TO NAVIGATION ON LAKE GEORGE. CONTACT BUCK DIRECTLY FOR A SLOT TO SPEND SOME TIME DOING THIS USEFUL WORK ON THE LAKE at 664-9815.

Have a safe and fun-filled rest of the summer.

BOATING SAFETY – COMMUNICATION

Lt/C Paul Kenny – Safety Officer

KEEP IN TOUCH

Communication is one of the important elements of boating safety. If you need assistance, how will you summon it? If you are going to render assistance to others, how will you communicate with them and how will you seek additional assistance if needed?

Forms of communication can be electronic, audible, visual, or written. Electronic includes VHF radio, cell phones and EPIRB (Emergency Position Indicating Radio Beacon). Visual include flares, orange smoke for day or red for day or night, flags, arm signals (be sure to use a bright cloth), orange distress flag (day), electric distress light (night) and fires. Audible include whistles, bells, horns, and your voice. Written includes your float plan.

I had an opportunity to read the Coast Guard reports as well as other articles on boating rescues in several past issues of SOUNDINGS (The Nation's Boating Newspaper, not our Squadron newsletter). The following summaries give examples of communication during rescues.

1. A fishing boat heard a distress signal over the radio and altered course to provide assistance. Visibility was poor; a storm was raging, and waves were high. Once in the vicinity of the stricken boat, the rescue boat sounded its horn. The crew of the stricken boat, now in a life raft, set off a flare to indicate their position. The rescue was successful.
2. A local 911 agency received a phone call from three hunters on a cellular phone to report their boat was disabled. Coordination between several marine and state agencies led to a successful rescue.
3. A duck hunter's boat had become stuck in ice. Initial communications with the man over the cell phone were broken, making it difficult to determine his position more quickly. The Coast Guard recommends that all boaters carry a VHF radio.
4. Coast Guard received a phone call of a 19-year old woman struggling in 48-degree water and 8-foot surf. Rescuers reported to Coast Guard units that they had lost visual contact of the woman, but could still hear her. Using night vision goggles, the crew of the helicopter was able to spot the woman, who had been pulled out by the current more than 600 yards from the shore.

5. In one instance, a boater used gas to light a signal fire. He did not have a radio or cellular phone on board to notify anyone of his situation. He had prepared a float plan so people new where to look for him. Having a radio on his vessel could have reduced the amount of time he had to wait before being rescued.

New York State requires that every mechanically propelled vessel 16 feet and greater in length carry United States Coast Guard approved visual distress equipment. Most boats can meet this requirement by carrying three USCG approved day/night hand held flares. Boats are also required to carry a whistle or horn. What additional communication devices you carry depends on the type of boating you plan to do. Think ahead and be prepared to keep in touch.

CRUISING DOWN THE RIVER

On Saturday July 9 an enthusiastic group of Lake George Power Squadron members participated in the Lock 7 – 12 Canal Fest held on the Erie Canal. Former Commander John Jermano gave historical tours of the old canal locks that are near the Schenectady Yacht Club. Former Commander Chuck Everson was instrumental in organizing the boat parade that went from the Schenectady Yacht Club to Jumpin' Jacks. Over 15 decorated boats participated in the parade, including the Caprice, captained by John Jermano and crewed by Commander Peter Balint and his wife Sandra, Executive Officer Armand Canestraro and his wife Donna and Donna's mother Rose, Admin. Officer Kevin McCarthy and his wife Mary, John's daughter Sarah and grandson Chris. Donna and Sarah provided accessories for a 1930's boating theme. The boat was beautifully decorated in patriotic red, white and blue. Also in the parade was the Aloha, Captained by Milt Bloomer and crewed by his wife Barbara and Soundings Editor David Wilkinson. The boats passed by the viewing stand at Jumpin' Jacks where the judges had a difficult time deciding which boats were the best decorated. The Caprice was awarded third prize. It was a beautiful day of boating and history.

On Friday, registration opens at 1500 followed by a cash bar at 1800 and welcoming dinner at 1900. Saturday's activities begin with registration and a continental breakfast at 0800.
